THE EVENING STAR.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent Family Circulation much more than the combined cir-culation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

t7In order to avoid delays on account of personal absence. letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Departments, according to tenor or purpose

England and America.

A year or more ago a correspondent interrogated The Star on the subject of Russia's friendship for the United States at the time of our civil war. He had read an editorial reference in The Star to the significance of the arrival of a Russian fleet at New York at a critical stage of that struggle, when England and France were considering interference, and he had read elsewhere an article which sought to discredit the story. The Star replied by reaffirming its statement, by showing that the American authorities, from President Lincoln down, could not have been misadvised as to so important a matter, and by pointing out that necessarily there was no specific record of the matter either in our State Department or in the archives at St. Petersburg. A transaction of such delicacy and moment is never put on paper and filed away.

In the discussion now current as to European sentiment toward the United States at the time war with Spain was approaching, and even after the storm broke, there are statements made which do not rest upon specific written records. In the very nature of things they cannot. Where England stood, where Austria stood, where France stood, where Germany stood, may best be gathered from general manifestations and local expressions. From those sources the great majority of the people of this country have gathered the opinion that England's sympathies were with us in that struggle. The extent to which the continental powers desired to go against us, and would have gone with a word of approval from England, we need not now trouble ourselves to dwell upon. The case is closed, and one of its most mortifying features is the fact that no anti-American anywhere in Europe said severer things about us at that time than were said by Americans right here at home. And what is more, the whole European impeachment of hypocrisy and bloody aggression is now the basis of a movement in the United States for partisan ends. Shall we bridle at the mere memory of a European fling while listening to its echo in Congress and

The main object of this hullabaloo is to array the United States against England in the matter of the South African war. It will fail. We have fought England twice. We have sympathized with Ireland in her distresses, and we still do. We do not forget that the aristocracy of England sided with the south in 1861-5, and wanted the Union destroyed. Our friends in England then were the queen, Prince Albert, and sturdy men of the type of John Bright. But as the lines are drawn on the world's affairs today England is our friend and we are England's friend, and the man who would disturb those relations for outside ends, or for domestic partisan ends, is extremely shortsighted; and to the extent to which he may exercise himself he will have his labor for his pains.

The People and the Inauguration.

As far as The Star has observed, not a word of serious protest is raised anywhere the government to hold the property. Coin the country against the proposition to lombia is to be asked not only to grant a change the date of the inauguration, while canal franchise and a strip of territory to at the same time many earnest expressions the United States, but to relinquish the of concurrence are being published in inright it now enjoys in prospect of succeedfluential newspapers. The movement appeals directly to a larger number of people than ever before. Washington is regarded now as never in the past as the center of people to demonstrate that the cost to the national interest. No other single city holds the interest of so many millions of and rights in Colombia to permit the ownnon-residents. Anything concerning the ership of the canal and its controlling strip capital, its equipment, its people, its doings, attracts immediate attention. The gregate of the Panama cost to such a point keen interest which the park commission's that the commission will logically swing plans have aroused in all quarters is a recent evidence of this fact. Transportation facilities are now such that it is regarded as easy for the resident of the far west to Panama by a reduction of the prospective fourney to Washington for a visit of a number of weeks, just to get in touch with ion can be safely reached by the Senate the factors which are shaping the destinies of the nation and to enjoy the distinctive the two findings by the commission, the social and political and the developing art atmosphere of the capital.

The throngs which have hitherto attended the inaugurations of the Presidents would unquestionably be much larger were it not for the fact that there is a decided chance of dangerously bad weather occurring in early March in this climate. The stories of sufferings endured by visitors to the capital on these occasions have scared away many an intending tourist. And the present outburst of sentiment in favor of a change of date may spring as directly from the wish on the part of the people to remove the obstacles to a pleasant and safe quadrennial visit pilgrimage to the American Mecca as from a realization of the common sense of the proposition.

Washingtonians believe that this sentiment, if properly organized, will produce results. The governors of the states, exofficio members of the committee to secure the necessary legislation to this end, are in a position to conserve the public opinion in their own commonwealths and to direct this vast current of national thought toward Congress. The inauguration of a President should be an occasion for a great outpouring of the people. When the city has been given its new dress as the ideal capital of the republic, for which it has been just measured by the country's leading outfitters, and can promise its guests a fair chance for good weather and at the worst only a mild wetting, there is little doubt that this quadrennial assemblage of citizens of all the states will be of vastly enlarged and truly national proportions.

Mr. Carnegie's beneficence has caused a large number of people who are willing to be helped without working to squander their money on postage stamps. Milwaukee and Chicago represent 1 combination of beer and sausage which might invite a moment of passing interest in Prince Henry.

Mr. Bryan and 1904.

To the surprise of some of his opponents in his own party, Mr. Bryan is still an object of considerable public interest. This has been very apparent during his latest visit east. The people have turned out to see him, and have given him a warm welcome. An admission fee at the door has not prevented a good attendance at his lectures. Wherever he has gone local democrats of influence and activity have called and expressed pleasure at meeting him. He declares that he will not offer for the presidency in 1904. Why then, the question is asked, this "swinging around the circle" as in the days when hope for the greatest American honor beat high in his bosom? Why this keeping in such close touch with the men who manage the party's machinery even in states where Bryanism in the full win?

Mr. Bryan did not attend the Kansas label steamers is in a certain measure greater than in the central portions of the city. Should one of these steamers break down while fighting a suburban fire the dress?"

The question addressed to the answers-to-correspondents men oftenest seems to be this: "What is Andrew Carnegie's address?" tide of its persuasiveness had no show to greater than in the central portions of the City convention for two reasons. He was a candidate for its favor, and he was the master of the situation. There was no necessity for him to leave home. Those whom he wished to see and to use were glad enough to go to him. He was as powerful at the Lincoln end of the longdistance telephone as he would have been in the convention hall. He had but to give his orders and they were obeyed. But with no designs on the nomination, and his only purpose the securing of what he considers a democratic platform, what will prevent Mr. Bryan from heading Nebraska's delegation to the next democratic national convention?

A railway to Bagdad! Ah, pray say not so The Logic of the Monroe Doctrine.

From the Buenos Ayres Herald. President Roosevelt is reported as having expressed a decided intention of enforcing the Monroe doctrine on the American continent. The scope of this is an interesting question for European as well as American statesmen. It has been declared by the President of the United States that it does not contemplate any interference with any power which might have to vindicate the rights of its citizens or subjects, but that no old world power shall increase its territorial possessions on the American conti-The corollary of this would be that no American nation should be allowed to in-American nation should be allowed to increase its possessions by conquest. If the United States is to warn off Europe from this part of the world, it must undertake to do the necessary policing, and see that the same principle is here maintained. That government made a bad break when it allowed Chile to conquer a part of two weaker nations on the Pacific without saying a world in protest. The Monroe destricts word in protest. The Monroe doctrine makes it the duty of that country to see that war, rapine and conquest shall not have free course on the American continent, for whose integrity it undertakes to It is said that this is the understanding of President Roosevelt of the scope of this doctrine, and therefore it will be his policy, in which case there will be a fair prospect of international peace, for there is but one nation on the American continent which is nation on the American continent which is openly pursuing a policy of conquest and robbery, and that is Chile, and the United States must either abandon the Monroe dectrine or carry it out to its logical conclusions and say to American nations, "fight all you like, but when you have done you will have the same boundaries as before the fighting." The recent policy of the United States stands in the way of the consistency of this policy, but it is the allconsistency of this policy, but it is the al-ternative of the Monroe doctrine.

Dirty Money. From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The smallpox epidemic has revived the agitation for clean paper money. There is no doubt in the minds of physicians that contagious diseases may be transmitted through the agency of soiled notes. Clean, crisp notes would naturally be less dangerous. When a note has made one round and returned to the bank of issue it should be retired from further
